

17-18 March : Ecological transition career fair

Confronted with the climate emergency and global environmental upheavals, our graduates are increasingly taking up positions of responsibility linked to the challenges of ecological transition in all sectors of activity. Within private sector companies, public administrations, local authorities, international organisations, associations or start-ups, they put their skills and expertise as analysts of societal changes at the service of the organisations they join and are key collaborators in addressing their transformation issues related to the current ecological and environmental transitions.

On internships or in employment, our students and graduates can occupy a wide variety of positions - negotiators, analysts, consultants, communicators, lawyers, etc. - depending on their areas of specialization: public policy, CSR, sustainable food, energy, climate, mobility, circular economy, biodiversity, waste management, real estate, infrastructure, sustainable finance, etc.
